Why Budo with children?

Budo is based on constructive attitudes to life and real ethical values.

People define themselves by what they do in life. Children too, of course: martial arts are fun and are really “cool” as a positive identification and attitude to life!

With our Aikido practice, we can grow into a harmonious and peaceful world together with our children. Being able to be strong without hurting others is a transforming experience. The holistic approach in Aikido training makes a valuable contribution to the development of children and young people, especially as a counterbalance to the more intellectual approach in everyday school life. In addition to improved coordination and a sense of space, the children benefit from a sharpening of the senses: they are more attentive and can concentrate better.

Children mean the future for our dojos. Without children’s training, our mats would age, our own development would stagnate or become an end in itself.

Apart from that, it turns out that what people do at a young age shapes their whole life. The sooner we can get children excited about Aikido, the more they will identify with the positive values of this martial art later on and be able to master difficult phases of life as they grow up.

Accompanying children and allowing them to experience their own abilities is a strong legacy! It means finding ways to teach Aikido as a mature and modern form of self-assertion in a child-friendly way, and it requires that we know ourselves well and bring our own experiences with us.

the Initiators & the initiation

are leading the Dojo Kikentai.Berlin, which they founded in 2009. In the beginning, the dojo was mostly membered by Kids, Teens and Youth. By now it still have a great number of unaged members. They enrich the dojo with their joyful energy, enthusiasm and zest for life. With increasing gratitude for and dedication to working with children, the desire to share, pass on and develop the experiences gained arose in exchange with other people active in teaching Budo for children.

Confronted with questions and challenges that concern the younger generation, everyday life in the dojo is characterized by the debate about what this generation needs in order to shape its work independently. Accompanied by the need to see strong characters grow up who can assert themselves against the temptations of our affluent society.

The program

.. would like to make a well-founded contribution to bringing Aikido into the young world. In addition to the holistic aspects of Aikido practice with children and sample sessions that are experienced in practice, we would also like to provide theoretical information on the basics and background of Budo, pedagogy, philosophy and much more. illuminate and deal with it. Some questions that concern us are:

How do children develop a willingness to learn? What conditions are needed for learning to take place? What contributes to children experiencing themselves as part of a community? How can clear rules be conveyed that promote respect and encourage reflection? What role do I want to play as a teacher? How can I support self-learning?

And of course, contrary to the principle of being the strongest, it's all about "experience"! It's about how children can assert themselves in their own strength and find a respectful and constructive way to deal with their (sometimes combative) potential. We can receive the openness, enthusiasm and naturalness that children bring with them as a gift and "develop" it with mindfulness.

The team

10 people can do more than 2, and everything is much more fun together!

Our program aims to create a framework for exchanging ideas with other committed children's Budo teachers, learning from each other and passing on experiences. Many speakers mean many personal experiences and even more questions, possibilities and impulses.

Do it your way

... as an investment in your own development, in a path that brings you joy and meaning.

You will be involved in a framework where respect and personal development are cultivated through mutual exchange. Together with like-minded people, you will gain valuable experiences that will help you advance on your path and allow you to grow. Being aware of your role also benefits your self-determined and empathetic demeanor.

Ultimately, your commitment as an Aikido teacher for children in full-time dojos, or in other projects, can be completely or partially your livelihood. We would be happy to support you on your journey. We look forward to seeing you!

What to bring in?

Of course you enjoy working with children and enjoy exercise. You are responsible and communicate with heart. You value your enthusiasm for Budo and your joy in working with children as a gift that you would like to continue to nurture and develop. You are welcome to bring experience in the physiological and/or pedagogical area. You have already completed a first aid on child course or are planning to do so. We are pleased about your interest in working with us and your motivation to further develop yourself as a children's Budo teacher!

Your contribution — your profit!

Taking part of the program is expecting the following costs:

- approx. 150* euros per seminar/workshop in Berlin (including 3 moduls)
- approx. 200-250* euros per intensive seminar in Brandenburg (incl. 4-5 modules), plus approx. 100 euros for room and board

The program's content and scope

The program consists of three main areas:

- Workshops on the weekend: on pedagogy, Budo philosophy, practical experience and teaching,
- documented development and exchange of experience through observation, supervision and Assistance in an Aikido-Dojo
- personal studies and practice (regular Aikido training in an Aikido-Dojo)

Initiated in 2023, annually three workshops with different speakers take place, in the Berlin/ Brandenburg area, including a three-day intensive summercamp. Each workshop will include specific modules with practical, theoretical and pedagogical focuses. Each speaker will give a practical experience of the content in an example unit. We also offer space for reflection, feedback, questions and exchange.

A workshop contains 3-4 modules, which are led by the respective speakers.

The entire program is modular and you can start at any time to join. Certified as continuing education, the program propose 200 hours in 1) the participation of 15 workshop modules 2) the experience development documented in the program pass including supervision and 3)the personal practice accompanied by a mentor.

The entire program is aimed at Aikidoists who are interested in a profound discussion and would like to make this effort. Participation in the entire program also offers participants the opportunity to benefit from regular exchange with the speakers and each other.

Apart from completing the program as further training, each individual workshop can also be attended without a program pass. Children's teachers who already have experience do benefit from the exchange with others and use the opportunity to focus on deepening their own know-how.

As part of the program, the speakers are invited to exchange ideas with each other and to further develop their own teaching.
